With just under 7% of the full-time federal workforce under the age of 30, it is critical that government recruits and retains highly-skilled early career talent.

But the federal hiring process can be daunting—and identifying opportunities within an institution as large and complex as our federal government can make it difficult for job seekers and those who support and advise them to know where to start.

The Federal Advisor Certificate Program enables Call to Serve members to become experts in all aspects of the federal hiring process, to gain a deep knowledge of the wide range of government job opportunities and to guide aspiring public servants as they prepare to launch their professional career.

Upon completion of this fully asynchronous seven-week program, participants will be able to help students and recent graduates use USAJOBS, identify paid opportunities in government, apply for federal work and better understand the different pathways into public service. The course culminates with a capstone project that allows participants to apply their knowledge to create a customized plan for connecting their students and campus community with federal career opportunities. Participants will gain:

- A deeper knowledge and understanding of the nuances of the federal hiring system.
- Access to a comprehensive list of the wide range of federal opportunities for students.
- Strategies for advising students through the federal hiring process.
- Conversation starters to spark students' interest in a federal career.
- Ideas for programs and training sessions to bring to the campus community.
